The evidence had not been completed on Monday.

Tuesday afternoon jury brought in verdict not guilty.

—The second case to be taken up for trial was Com. vs. Unger J. Snyder, charged with larceny of chickens on information of Harvey Moritz. —The last criminal case tried will be Com. vs. Thaddeus Warren, charged with larceny of coal, on information of C. H. Wilson. This is case begun at August Court and came to an abrupt end by a mix up in jury, a man not selected having by mistake gotten into the jury.

—The deer camps opened yesterday morning, Tuesday, November 15, and for two weeks to Dec. 1, the beautiful animals will be hunted. From the reports of the State game wardens the deer are more in abundance than for years, having been seen in their haunts all along the South Mountain. They have been frequently seen in the neighborhood of the White Pine Sanatorium, herds of eight and nine have been seen grazing at different points during the summer. They have been seen at a number of points in Buchanan Valley and throughout the mountain toward Mt. Holly.

—It is estimated that on the first day of the season about four hundred hunters armed with deadly rifles will be searching the mountains for the deer. The vast majority of the army of hunters will not get near enough to a deer to get even a shot, and the average killed will not likely be over 30, as that has been about the number killed for several years.

—The State allows one deer to be shot by each hunter in a season and the deer must be one with visible horns and no deer can be sold or bought. It is possible that there will be deer shot as has been the case almost every year. The hunter often gets more nervous on sight of the game than the animal and shoots before thinking. There is a nice fine of $100 to be paid by the hunter who kills a doe. All hunters should help in the enforcement of the law for the care of the doe for it has been by reason of this provision of the law that the deer have increased and that this fine sport has been preserved.

—All the old camps will be occupied this year and many homes near the mountains will entertain hunters as guests and at Graeffenburg Inn preparations have been made for more than half a hundred sportsmen, and there will be many individual hunters throughout the mountain, farmers and their sons.

—A number of the deer hunting camps of this place left town on Saturday, others on Monday and Tuesday for their respective camps as follows: To Cashtown Club camp, James G. McIlhenny, F. Mark Bream, Paul A. Martin, Wm. H. Kalbfleisch, W. H. Ziegler, Wm. Bushman, Leo Bushman, Edmund Power, D. J. Forney, John H. Crowe, Norman Storrick, J. D. Swope, Clyde Bream, and Earl A. Deatrick. To the Ardenville Club camp, James Elchoitz, John Kimple, John Hall, Jr., and James Wise. To the Brysonia Club camp, Wm. J. Eden, George Taylor, Burton D. Williams, William Rotter, Roy E. Zinn, John Grove, Joe Butt, Harry Hoke, Walter Mehrling, and Charles Lott. To the Monterey Club camp, William Fleming and L. O. Beiler.

—There will be many hunters in the mountains from different parts of the county, from Chambersburg, Waynesboro, and other points of Franklin county. They come from York, Carlisle, Harrisburg and more distant points.

—Murder Charged at Football.

—On last Saturday a football game was played between West Virginia University team and Bethany College. West Virginia team, ending in a victory for former by score of 8 to 0. Homer N. Young, Esq., of Pittsburgh, was the referee of the game. During the game one Thomas McCoy alias Gardner, of the Bethany team, slugged Rudolph Munk, left halfback and captain of the University team. Munk died Saturday night from blood clot on brain believed to be due to blow on head. The authorities have taken charge of matter and upon the following sworn statement of Homer N. Young McCoy or Gardner will be charged with murder. The statement of Mr. Young, a graduate of Gettysburg College, and well known here is as follows:

—Rudolph Munk was running down the field in advance of the man with the ball, West Virginia having the ball about thirty yards from the Bethany goal. He was not close to the ball. On this play he was met by a man said to be Gardner, as his name was given to me by Townsend, the coach for the Bethany team. On this particular play this man Gardner ran toward Munk while both were running down the field. About the time they got ten yards beyond the scrimmage line, Gardner behind Munk, to the best of my recollection, struck Munk on back of Munk's head with his, Gardner's fist.

—Munk fell and Gardner kind of fell over him. Gardner got on his feet and started to walk off the field. For this foul I put him out of the game. He made no reply and no protest whatever.

—Munk was unconscious. Evidently to me the blow which felled Munk was intentional.

—Munk, the dead player, is known to a number of our college students, having played several years on the Bucknell football team.

—McCoy has been discharged on ground killing was an accident.

—Mrs. Mary Pfeffer and daughter Mrs. Huber Miller have returned from a visit of several weeks in Balto.

—Mr. and Mrs. John Reed Scott left last week for Washington for the winter.

the last quarter by Gettysburg, our team playing a fast and clean game and winning by score of 10 to 3. Up to the last quarter the ball moved back and forth over the field in a punting duel, Dickinson having a little the better of the punting because of the strong western wind. When ends were changed the decided advantage was with Gettysburg than when they had been playing against the wind, and they had the ball most of the time in Dickinson's territory. The last quarter was fast, filled with brilliant plays, two touch downs being made, one by Snyder and the other by Weimer. The score of Dickinson was made in the first quarter of first half by goal being kicked from the field.

The victory was celebrated by the College boys from the time the game was over until away in the night and every one is looking forward to and hoping for a similar result in the Thanksgiving game with Franklin and Marshall at Lancaster.

The accident happened when a limb on which Mr. Rinehart was standing broke and threw him head first to the pavement. He was about fifteen feet from the ground but in the fall and when about half way down his feet fortunately caught in the forks of the tree and held him for a moment thus avoiding what would otherwise have resulted fatal. His injuries consist of several ugly gashes in the back of his head, lacerated ear and minor bruises to his body. Mr. Rinehart was in a semi-conscious condition for some time but is slowly recovering from his injuries.

Home Talent Musical Company.

The town Y. M. C. A. have decided to put on a home talent musical comedy entitled "Gibson Family Reunion." They have arranged for the production to be drilled by the Bock Entertainment Co. of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. This company has made a business of home talent entertainments for 15 years and is the most successful company of its kind in existence. Miss Bock, the owner and manager of the company and author of "Gibson Family Reunion." The "Gibson Family Reunion" is in two acts. The first shows the Gibson Family preparing for the reunion. The second shows the assembly of guests at the reunion, with Mrs. Gibson introducing specialties, choruses, dances, etc., for the entertainment of her guests.

In the first act Mr. and Mrs. Gibson have just returned from a Woman's Rights convention, and find Molly, the Irish servant girl, and Billy, the stammering chore boy, singing love songs instead of getting the house in order for the reunion. Mrs. Gibson being a strong minded, forceful woman, at once at her return commands not only Molly and Billy to proceed to the preparing the house for the reunion but also in a most authoritative manner demands that her husband, Job Gibson, assist with the decorating, etc. Mr. Gibson from start to finish impersonates the part of the meek, henpecked man, while Mrs. Gibson very strongly represents the new woman suffragette type. Their two daughters, Caroline and Phyllis represent two very opposite types of character—Caroline being very haughty, dignified and rather disagreeable, while Phyllis portrays the very bright, sweet, clever happy go lucky kind—ever ready for a jolly good time and continually doing the most improper things which dreadfully shock her most haughty sister Caroline. Molly, the Irish servant, is a typical Irish character ever bubbling over with wit, while Billy the stammering chore boy is an excruciatingly funny specimen whose worrisome stammer continually gets him into trouble.

The entertainment will be given November 24, in Walters' Theatre.

Fire Destroys Big Barn.

A fire of unknown origin started Sunday evening shortly before 7 o'clock in a straw stack adjacent to the barn on the Charles Bechtel farm in Berwick township, tenanted by Elder Harget located near Abbottstown. The fire gained great headway, fanned by the high wind and in a short time the large barn was in flames. All attempts to save the structure proved futile, and the efforts of the neighbors and people from Abbottstown and vicinity who soon gathered were confined to saving the dwelling house from catching fire, which was successfully accomplished. The barn was totally destroyed, together with the season's crops including a lot of corn and corn fodder. It was impossible to remove all of the stock and farming implements, and there perished in the flames two horses, one colt, four head of cattle and 27 hogs. Considering the high price of pork, the latter loss alone is a big one.

Property Sales.

T. J. Winebreunier has sold the Pfeffer property on Emmittsburg road recently bought at public sale to Wm. H. Johns.

—The deer camps opened yesterday morning, Tuesday, November 15, and for two weeks to Dec. 1, the beautiful animals will be hunted. OVER FOUR SCORE AND TEN

ONE OF McSHERRYSTOWN OLDEST CITIZENS FOUND DEAD.

Veteran of County Passes Away at an Age Exceeding Four Score Years.

SAMUEL G. SNEERINGER, one of McSherrystown's oldest citizens, was found dead in bed last Friday morning, Nov. 11, by his granddaughter, Miss Marie Timmins. His death was the result of a stroke of apoplexy received some time early that morning. Mr. Sneeringer was aged 90 years, 2 months and 3 days and made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Maggie R. Timmins of McSherrystown. Notwithstanding his advanced age, he enjoyed good health. His retentive memory and conversational ability were regarded as remarkable by his friends who enjoyed his society. Several months ago the editor had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Sneeringer at his home. He seemed in perfect health and all his faculties were unimpaired. He had a wonderful memory and vividly recalling incidents told several good stories of former days and showed his enjoyment of life by laughing heartily. He mentioned his age and when several Gettysburg citizens of advanced age were mentioned as active and spry, he answered with a laugh that he was as spry as any of them. Mr. Sneeringer was last seen alive at 2:30 a. m. by his daughter, Mrs. Timmins, who passed through his room and conversed with him. At 7:30 a. m. Charles E. Miller called at the Timmins' home to see Mr. Sneeringer on business, and when Miss Marie Timmins went to her grandfather's room to call him, she found that he was dead. The deceased was a son of Joseph and Margaret (O'Boyle) Sneeringer of Conewago township, and was married in 1812 to Miss Elizabeth Steiger, daughter of George and Elizabeth Steiger, who died six years ago. He was a well known retired farmer and merchant, having farmed all his life near McSherrystown and in addition conducted a general store on Main street for a number of years. He is survived by the following children: Sister St. Ephraim of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia; Sister M. Raphael, Mother Superior at a Lebanon convent; Maggie R. Timmins of McSherrystown and one son, E. F. Sneeringer of Maryland. He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Augustus DeHone of Hanover, and one brother, Vincent Sneeringer of Humboldt, Kansas. Five grand-children also survive. Funeral was Monday, Nov. 14, with a mass of requiem in St. Mary's Catholic church. Rev. L. Aug. Reutter officiating. Interment was made in their burial lot at Conewago Chapel cemetery.

The morning was cool and she had not protected herself carefully and the same day was troubled with a cold that developed. This cold ended in a severe case of pneumonia. The critical stage was passed last week and hopes were entertained for her recovery. On Sunday a relapse came and death ensued. The funeral was held yesterday—Tuesday—afternoon, interment in the New Oxford Cemetery. She leaves beside her husband two daughters Mrs. Sallie M. Bender and Mrs. J. H. Duttera, both of New Oxford. Blankets--Cotton & Wool :: Fleece Comforts Under Price

In a way, we did a stroke of bad business two years ago in buying twice as many Blankets as we could sell in one season---we bought them in such quantities because we got them under price at the time. Since then Blankets have very much advanced in price, both cotton and wool, cotton especially, but we are selling them priced on the basis of their cost in June 1909, in other words, the same old price of last year.

We only name a few here, judge the stock by these prices

1 Lot 1 1-4, Heavy Grey Cotton Blankets, full size, - - - $1.00
These are larger and better than we were able to sell at this price when Cotton was 10 cents per pound.
1 Lot 1 1-4, Heavy White Blankets, full size and very heavy - - $2.50
1 Lot 1 1-4, White and Grey, 100% Wool. This is a hammer at - $5.00

Our price on these goods was higher last year

Does Not Stimulate

Ayer's Sarsaparilla does not stimulate. It does not make you feel better one day, then as bad as ever the next. It is not a strong drink. No reaction after you stop using it. There is not a drop of alcohol in it. You have the steady, even gain that comes from a strong tonic and alterative. We wish you would ask your doctor about this. He knows. Trust him. Do as he says. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Democratic Call to Arms.

Senator Dewalt, Democratic State Chairman, after the result was known to Pennsylvania issued a statement under caption, "A Call to Arms—A Warning and an Appeal," as follows:
"Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Ohio and Indiana have elected Democratic governors and made effective their protest against Republican misrule and the policy of the Republican party. Wherever elections were held this protest was manifest and pronounced. It was not a local condition. It was as widespread as the nation's extent. No such defeat of a dominant party has been experienced since the days of 1892 and clearly foreshadows the election of a Democratic president in 1912. If the Democratic party makes no blunders, and is wise enough to read the lesson correctly."

This same sentiment of revolution, it was revolution and not rebellion, was just as pronounced in Pennsylvania as it was in New York and New Jersey and for the same reasons, and in Pennsylvania the protest was effective. Of the 88,000 votes cast, 50,000 declared their hostility to the Republican party and its representatives in Pennsylvania, and yet these 50,000 ballots in the greatest state in the union, count for nothing so far as practical results are concerned. The Republican candidate is barely elected, lost over 300,000 Republican voters, who either refused to vote or voted against him.

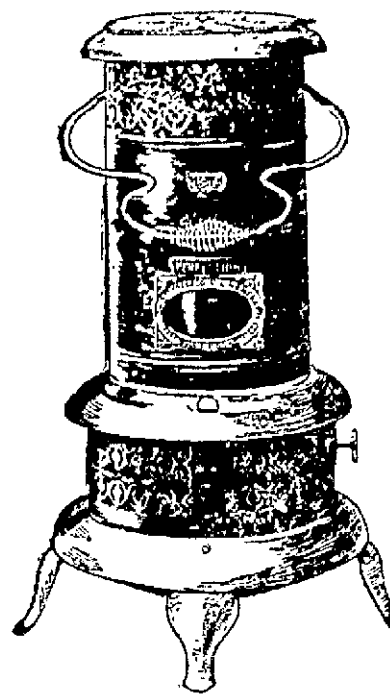

Three hundred and sixty thousand voters believing that the Keystone State was the best hope of defeating the Machine, rallied under its banner, and 120,000 Democrats, hoping against hope, and believing in the integrity of their party, followed their candidate to defeat, Pennsylvania, therefore, as a Republican governor who is not the choice of a large majority of its people, simply because the opposition Machine was not united.

It is of no avail to seek or give the reasons for this unfortunate division of the 400,000 voters. The fact remains that they were divided, and that they bear the blame. Criminals and scoundrels, multi-millionaires, jealousy and greed can do no good, but only increase the harm. If fusion could have been effected the Republican Machine would have been defeated by a majority of over 100,000 votes, and the defeat would have been caused by the Republicans themselves, caused by the independent voters and the Democrats.

"The only sure method of defeating a machine government is through a union of the independent members of dominant party with a minority party, the members of which, as a rule, if not forgiven. The attempt at personal domination, or the rule of a few, must be avoided if sought.

"The Democratic party is greater than any clique or aggregation of a few. It is a potential fighting force of over 400,000 earnest people, and every one of them must be suited and solicited to join with every other honest man, in securing what every man in Pennsylvania wants—honest and economical government. Mere invitation is not sufficient. There must be no artificial neutrality between these divided forces. There must be a sincere expression of the desire to get together, and that will be best evidenced by forgetting the past and looking toward a brighter future."

"There must be no more calling of names and abuse of individuals, personal preference must be subordinated to the good of the common cause, for I truly believe that however different the point of view, we are all looking to the accomplishment of the same end, divided, we cannot obtain it; united, we are certain to achieve it. The voters who left the ranks of the Democracy in this election should not be too harshly censured, those who remained in the ranks are not to be blamed and the Independents or Republicans who joined their forces must be encouraged, and the only way to encourage and solidify these, now divided, is to imbue them with the hope of ultimate success in 1912."

"Pennsylvania, with its 28 delegates in a national convention, is a power second only to one in the union. Its voice can be made resonant for reform and good government if these discordant elements join in one song. The chairman of the Democratic party, by the rules of the organization will remain its chairman until January, 1912. There is more than one year in which to labor for this union, and speaking as the head of the Democratic organization, I now maintain that my past efforts have always been to secure a united Democracy, and obtain the aid of independent voters. These efforts will not cease, and if a spirit of cordiality and recognition of the just claims of every one, who truly has at heart the good of the cause, can effect the desired result, these elements shall not be regarded as my conduct, or in the organization as now represented."

"The above is therefore, both an appeal and a call to arms, not a calling to arms with which to combat each other, but with which to combat the common foe. I call to those who are willing to forget self and to remember the high ideals of true Democracy, equal rights to all and special privileges to none."

"Second, a desire to rebuke both regular political organizations. "Third, the belief that the Democratic nomination was controlled or influenced by the agents of the Republican party and by discredited representatives of other organizations. "Fourth, the belief that the Independent movement, represented by the Keystone party was the surest avenue of securing the defeat of the Republican Machine."

"It is of no benefit to discuss the truth or falsity of these reasons. The voters believed some or all of them, and the result is what we know. The question then is, how can a similar disaster be prevented? The sentiment is here. The people are alive to the situation and it is their earnest desire and determination to have reform and justice. They do not believe in the policy of the Republican party, and they are disgusted with the political management of its leaders in this state. Can this militant force of 400,000 voters be united, and, with the result, to win the establishment of honest government in Pennsylvania?"

"I believe that such coalition can be accomplished, but in order that it may be done, the Democracy of this state must be infused into its veins new blood, and political vessels must be put upon the political shelf. Old methods, which are little better than those employed by the discredited party must be abandoned, and all Democrats, for only a new and entirely independent, must be formed once more to give their aid and counsel in the party management of this state, either of judgment or of administration, must be forgotten."

Malinda's HOMECOMING

By NELLIE CRAVEY GILLMORE
(Copyright, 1909 by Associated Literary Press.)

Malinda arrived at the decision abruptly; she would go home that night. Jack Cottrell's declaration of love the night before had, presumably, been the eye-opener to her position;

in reality it was the climax of gradual disillusionment.

She had been living in a fictitious atmosphere that daily was growing more flat and intolerable to her sensitively constructed temperament. At first the open prominence and success

she had achieved in her work had exhilarated her; now she was beginning to suffer the inevitable depression of the aftermath.

Yes, she would leave New York

(and her career) that night. To be exact, she would take the seven o'clock train that would put her in her home town at five in the morning.

At first she thought of telegraphing;

then she decided to surprise them all.

How would they receive her? She had deliberately gone against her family's wishes in this move, and refused stubbornly, during the months that followed, to listen to their persuasions to return home.

And Billy? Had she ceased altogether to occupy a place in his thoughts? For a time he had written to her regularly, until only an occa-

LINEN NEEDS CARE

COMPARATIVELY EASY THING TO SPOIL FINE FABRICS.Simple Precautions That Will Add Life to the Table Drapery and at the Same Time Greatly Improve Its Appearance.The housewife who leaves to an overworked maid or clerk the care of her linen need not wonder if her best linen is ruined soon.The napkins should always be folded so the embroidered initial will show on the outer flap, but this still can be done and the napkin folded in different ways each time it is laundered.Starch is an abomination in good table linen; however, if one has a well worn cloth which seems to have no "body," and thus becomes soiled quickly, it is wise to add about a part of thin, hot "made starch" to half a tub of bluing water and wring the linen out of this; sufficient "body" will be given it to make it wear much longer before another washing is necessary.When about to iron table linen prepare some hot borax water, and with a certain whisk broom sprinkle every inch of the linen thoroughly, roll up tightly in a clean towel, and let it lie at least an hour or so, and then iron.
A small but heavy brush having stiff, fine bristles and a short, thick handle, should be used instead of a coarse comb for fringed linen and doilies.When there is no room to put the cloth away with a single fold in the middle, it may be folded first in the middle and then the selvage sides may be turned back, thus folding the cloth into quarters lengthwise, having each fold appear on the right side;
there must be no cross folds, however, nor are these necessary if a cloth is well ironed and aired, since it may be folded lightly away in the drawer and carefully smoothed out by hand when it is laid on the table. Several cloths may be stored perfectly in small space by hanging a wooden curtain pole against the wall of the linen chest, throwing the cloths over this pole, one over the other.It is unwise to put away a piece of stained linen until the general wash day, which is always a difficult day in any household, and then try to remove it.The average servant, when anything is spilled on a tablecloth, usually removes it from the table and throws it into a bag or hamper, still damp, along with the rest of the soiled clothes of a household.Long before wash day arrives whole families of little creatures are at work and finally, when the linen is removed from the basket to be laundered, there is a greenish spot which cannot be removed only by the use of a strong bleaching agent which surely injures the fabric, although the injury may not be apparent at once. This is the case even if clean water has been spilled on the cloth in the case of tea or coffee, wine, or fruit juice. If put into the hamper without first removing the stain and drying the cloth, not only is mildew apt to appear but the stain becomes set in the fabric so that it is well nigh impossible ever to remove all trace of it without using an alkali so strong that the fabric is weakened perceptibly.Instead of first treating the mildew, after it has been allowed to form, the average servant puts the cloth to soak in strong soapy water—perhaps hot water—along with the rest of the soiled linen, and the last state of this tablecloth when it finally emerges from the laundry is worse than the first.

Beeswax in Cracks.

Tidy cracks or splits in furniture can easily be filled in with beeswax, so that the marks will hardly show.
Furniture dealers cover up many blemishes in this way.Slightly soften the beeswax until it becomes like putty; then press it firmly into the cracks, and smooth the surface over with a thin knife. Sandpaper the surrounding wood and work some of the dust into the beeswax.This gives a finish to the wood, and when it is varnished the cracks will have disappeared. Putty is sometimes used in the same way, but it soon dries and falls out, while beeswax will remain in practically forever.

Florence Salad.

Make a stuffing of Dutch cheese, half of a chopped pimento, half a minced onion, a dash of paprika, salt and pepper. Cut off the tops of some green peppers, wash and clean them inside, removing all the seeds; let them lie in cold water until firm, and fill them with the stuffing. Lay the peppers on the until ready to serve, that is, until the cheese has become perfectly firm; then cut them in slices a quarter of an inch thick, using a very sharp knife, and taking care not to disturb the cheese. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves with mayonnaise. This is an unusually pretty and novel salad for a party.

Raspberry Vinegar.

Put a pound of raspberries in a china bowl and pour over them a quart of the best white wine vinegar. Next day strain the liquid in a pound of fresh raspberries. The following day do the same, but do not squeeze the fruit, only drain liquor as dry as possible.

Almond and Cherry Salad.

Put a quart of cherry and almond small round almonds blanch and travet. Cover with vinegar and dressing.

THE EASTERN PENITENTIARY

STORY OF THE PLACE TO WHICH LAW BREAKERS ARE SENT.

Important Changes That Are Transforming the Place From What It Has Been.

At some term of court of this county during the year there is a conviction and the sentence is a term in the Eastern Penitentiary. While the place is thus familiar to our people, yet little is known of the great prison. The "North American" recently told the following story of the place:

Set down in the heart of Philadelphia is a village of optimists. It is a community of about 1,500 souls. Its life is entirely apart. Dead walls of stone, thirty feet high and crowned with beetling ramparts, prescribe the narrow limits of all activities in the village. The one iron invincible door swings ever inward.

The hurrying world on the outside shudders and quickens its pace as it goes by those grim barricades. Occasionally men and women prompted by curiosity or humanity, get permission to pass through the doors and view the life of the men and women immured in the village of remorse.

And when the kindly or curious visitors have passed within the iron gates, have walked down the long stone corridors, have looked into the neat white cells, have watched the convicts absorbed in their work at hand looms or lathes, have seen them in earnest, well-ordered hurry in the yards or aisles, have heard the warbling of 2,000 little yellow songsters, have listened to the swelling strains of a brass band, of which the first cornet is a "lifer" in for murder; have joined in the cheers of a whole line of cells uttering their thanks to an orchestra, of which the leader is a famous bank defaulter; have studied the faces of the prisoners and have found there no trace of resentment or hopelessness, have seen in most the countenances positive cheerfulness and in many a genuine and serious interest in the things about them, the visitors may well wonder.

If a visitor can take his mind off the marvel of this mysterious spirit in a penitentiary, he may speculate as to its value to the state when those prisoners who are not in for life may be set free to choose between walks of usefulness and ways of crime.

The old sullen, defiant attitude is entirely lacking. There is friendliness toward the little world within the walls of Eastern Penitentiary. There is some hope that the same spirit of friendliness will be maintained toward the big world outside when the convict goes through the heavy iron doors to freedom and a new life.

That is what the observer may think, and perhaps his reasoning is in the right direction. And yet the man who, more than anybody else, has been instrumental in the transmutation of the prison spirit, probably had no such thought when he began his work. And he is under no illusions now as to having found a panacea for crime. He is a policeman, with a policeman's view of the offender. "He is getting what is coming to him, and the probability is that he will be back again after he is out," is Robert J. McKenty's personal attitude toward the habitual criminal.

But that is only part of his creed. For in the two years that "Bob" McKenty has been warden of Eastern Penitentiary there has been a complete revolution of its management, in the relations between the prisoners and the officers of the prison, in the physical, mental and moral condition of the convicts.

If you talk to Warden McKenty long enough he may let you into the secret of his administration. And then you will find that it is a mixture in just the correct proportions of human kindness and common sense.

"I try to treat everybody as I would like to be treated myself if I were in his place," he says. "Why, I've got a lot of my own boys here," he adds. "And as he proceeds to talk you will understand that 'his own boys' are criminals whom he arrested or prosecuted and sent to the penitentiary during his long service on the police force of Philadelphia.

"Yes, sir," he may add, "a lot of these fellows I put away myself, but I am on as friendly terms with them as with any prisoner in the institution."

How friendly that is no one can appreciate who has not followed the bubbling and kindly warden through the corridors of the great prison and seen the warmth of the friendly greetings between him and the convicts.

He knows every one of the 1415 men and thirty-three women by name. It is "How are you John?" "Good morning, Mary." "Well, Pete how did you like the soup today?" "Do they give you enough to eat, Tom?"

He knows the little prison likings and interests of each soul under his care; he finds out their tastes in the matter of occupation and their capabilities for development as far as the prison regulations will permit.

The same qualities that won for him the love of the men under his command when, during his short term as director of public safety, make it easy for him to command the affections of the unfortunates who are caught in the remorseless grip of the law.

But, of course, Warden McKenty could not have worked the miracle that has taken place in the Eastern Penitentiary if he had not had behind him a board in fullest sympathy with his work. Indeed, before "Bob" McKenty ever came into the institution the board had had visions of such a transformation as has taken place.

In the new warden they found just the instrument they had been looking for. And it is also true that the board looks beyond the warden's range of vision and sees more lasting results in his work than he dreams of. The members back of the warden, and they supplement his labors with a great deal of work of their own, personal work as well as official. They have dreams of the reformation of the prisoners, most of whom they believe to be moral degenerates.

"Bob" McKenty, working with the board of inspectors, does the things they want done because he has been dealing with criminals all his life, and he knows they are human beings, and that to get the best out of them they have to be treated as such.

And while he has the policeman's belief that a real criminal will always bear watching, and that the old offenders are apt to come back, his own work is having its effect upon him. He is beginning to have stronger hopes for the young convicts and a belief that the humanizing treatment which they undergo in the reformed penitentiary may send them forth to lives of decency and usefulness.

This, he believes, will be more likely if while in prison they can be taught something which will enable them to make a living when they get out into the world.

The prison itself is its own best story. A party of inquiring citizens who visited it one day last week had heard something of this new penitentiary which had grown up on the site of the old one whose name was synonymous with the obsolete cruelties of a past generation in prison management.

At on time Eastern Penitentiary was notorious as a place where men went insane in their cells, and tuberculosis was so virulent within its walls that to a person of weak physique a term in prison was little short of a death sentence.

Solitary confinement had become an instrument of torture and death.

The very first thing noted by the visiting party last week was the total absence of the recognized "prison smell." There was not the slightest suggestion of the odor of disinfectants that are so much used in such institutions to disguise odors scarcely less objectionable.

Except in the hospital wards there is only one use for disinfectants in Eastern Penitentiary now. That is when a prisoner is first received. He is then thoroughly disinfected.

After that he lives a clean life in clean surroundings, with sanitary plumbing, sterilized water, wholesome food, good ventilation and as much sunshine as it is possible to afford him.

He has regular exercises in the open air, clean beds, clean clothing, so why should it be necessary to flood the place with mephitic chemicals. There are no bad odors to hide.

The plumbing in the entire institution was renewed under the new administration. It was one of Warden McKenty's first reforms. The work was done by prison labor and cost a fraction of what it would have cost at contract. The old system was foul and sent to high heaven smells that even cressets couldn't hide. Now the cells are kept as sanitary as most homes. There isn't a bedbug in the place.

This is a lot to write about a prison odor that wasn't there. But that odor has been so long a time-honored institution that its absence seemed well worth inquiring into. The explanation is an important chapter in the history of the transformation of the penitentiary.

Perhaps the next feature that impressed itself on the visitors was the absence of the prison palor. The men who hurried along the corridors with such business-like air, as if on important errands, were plainly prisoners. They wore the gray uniforms of the state. But they were neither sullen nor pale. They had a high, healthy complexion and were cheerfully busy. The complexion was accounted for by the fact that it is the policy of the management to give the prisoners as much outdoor exercise as possible, to keep the cells ventilated and to give plenty of wholesome food.

The cheerfulness was accounted for by members of the prison board present on the ground that the prisoners were busy. "It's the one thing that the prisoner begs for," said Murrell Dobbins, president of the board. "Ask any one of them what you can do for him, and the answer in most cases is to give him work to do. The state laws will not let us work more than 10 per cent. of the inmates in any one line. The thing that these men need most is to be kept busy at something that will enable them to develop their minds and teach them how to make a living. If we could work all the prisoners every day, we could make this institution self-supporting."

In the meantime Warden McKenty had been moving along the corridor. The prisoners who were about cheerfully saluted him. Here and there he stopped at a cell, and greeted the fellow with as cordial a clasp as if he were an old friend.

The party comes to a cell in which two men were working at lathes. The warden opens the door and the visitors pass in. The articles on which the prisoners were working are examined. They are delicate little objects in metal, done with exquisite workmanship.

"Ah," says a visitor, "you were a jeweler before you got in here."

"No," replies the prisoner. "I was a huckster."

"Did you ever do work of this kind before?"

"Never."

"But you worked with tools."

"Never saw a lathe until I saw it in this cell."

"How about your cellmate?"

"Oh, he's a coal miner. Couldn't speak a word of English when he came here. Can't speak much now."

When the party got back to the warden's office, there was exhibited a cabinet which contained some of the workmanship of this pair of convicts. The Polish coal miner had made a miniature pair of handcuffs which worked with perfect mechanical precision on a little key. The maker had never seen a pair, until they were put on his wrists as he was taken to the penitentiary.

Another feature of the exhibit was a perfect revolver, about as long as diameter of a silver dollar. This too, is complete in its mechanism. It is the work of a huckster. When these men are discharged they will be able to take jobs as artisans in fine metal-working trades.

They were both happy and proud of their accomplishments, with an interest in life and ambition that they never had before. Both got into trouble from not having enough to do of the right kind of work to keep them out of mischief and from booze. The huckster called it "skads."

Another exhibition of fine workmanship was that of a burglar up for a long term. He makes inlaid boxes. One that he had already finished contains 7000 pieces of wood. He made it on an order, and it has taken him three months to complete it.

The money that the prisoners get for this kind of work is deposited to their credit in the bank of the institution. They are at liberty to draw on this for such articles in the prison store as they are permitted to have.

These are sold at cost. A notable line in the prison store is the bird seed, for the 2000 canaries eat a lot of fodder. Some prisoners who can afford to buy the feed have five or six birds.

If the prisoners have relatives who are in need, the prisoners can give an order on the penitentiary bank for their benefit. The balance they have on account when they are discharged is paid them, and often is a comfortable sum on which they are able to start life anew. One prisoner recently left with nearly $300.

A great many of the men are employed at weaving or knitting, or in the printing department, the machines all being run by hand. The women do fancy work, which is sold for their benefit. All work of repairing and rebuilding within the prison is done by the prisoners. A new wing now in course of construction will cost the state about $50,000. Under the contract system it might have cost three times that amount. It is built of hollow tile and reinforced concrete. If ever it is desired to remove it, it will have to be blown up with dynamite. Tools will make no impression on it.

The prison buildings are being constantly remodeled to bring them up to the demands of modern ideas. The hospital has been remodeled. A new operating room has been constructed. It is said by surgeons to be in its appointments the very best of any in this country. It cost the institution about $1000. Under contract it would have been nearly $5000. Every cell has comfortable iron beds, all made in the prison. Under the old system they had a couple of boards or wooden trestles for beds.

"This is our contagious building," said one of the inspectors. The party entered, for there wasn't anything contagious in it except the music. The prison band was playing. Two of the players are in for murder. There are four yegs-men, one or two burglars and other major felons. The band is largely made up of long term prisoners.

A member of the Philadelphia Orchestra, who took an interest in the prisoners, gave his time to teaching them music. The instruments are the gift of Robert A. Balfour, one of the board of inspectors.

Mr. Balfour's sympathy for the prisoners takes many forms. Learning about one woman convict who couldn't eat anything but soup, he found out that it was because she didn't have any teeth. He bought her a set. In another instance, Mr. Balfour found a prisoner in tears over the death of a child, which news he had just received from his wife. Mr. Balfour sent the woman money to cover the funeral expense.

But his pets in the prison are the band and the orchestra. The humanizing and softening effect of these on the prisoners is truly wonderful. When the visiting party went into the contagious house the band was playing "Hearts and Flowers," made so familiar by its use in pathetic scenes on the stage. There wasn't a man in the band that didn't look as if he had heard a touching sermon when the piece was finished.

The other musical organization, the string band, gives a concert every night, each corridor—or block as it is called in prison—being favored in order.

The music is the big expression of the spirit that pervades the whole institution. A half-dozen cabinet organs for use in the religious services are other expressions of it. The chapel has a piano.

"Lots of the prisoners join a chorus here," said Mr. McKenty. "Some people say it doesn't do them any good after they get out. But one thing sure, it doesn't do them any harm."

The school in which the illiterates are taught to read and write is another new feature. After the primary course they are put into the corresponding school, which is comprehensive enough to include every prisoner in the place. The lessons are sent to the cells, the papers collected, corrected and returned on the plan of the established mail courses of the big corresponding schools.

Dr. Charles B. Hart, of the board of inspectors, makes the school his special care, though all the members are enthusiastic for it.

The visiting party turned over the lessons of the day and saw work in map drawing and penmanship which would have been creditable to grammar grade pupils in the public schools.

The work was that of men who hadn't known how to read or write a few months ago. One of the inspectors has a letter that he had just received from a former prisoner. It was in a cursive hand and told of the writer's success in business since leaving the penitentiary. He learned to read and write in prison.

But howsoever important are these efforts at training the prisoners, they are not more so than the human touch which is supplied by Mr. McKenty and the individual members of the board. An instance of this is in the case of an Italian prisoner, who had given $100 to some society which was trying to get him a pardon. That was the last he ever saw of the $100 or the society's agent until Warden McKenty took charge. He heard of the swindle and sent word to the agent to have the $100 at the prison next morning or he would be arrested. He had the $100 on hand.

The prisoner awakened to the fact that the warden was his friend instead of his enemy, as he had thought, from that day he was a model prisoner.

It is the spirit permeating all the relations of the prison authorities with the convicts that has changed the atmosphere of the institution. Recently a guard died. The prisoners in the corridor where he had been stationed took up a collection and sent a $10 funeral piece to his funeral.

And yet this humanizing of the institution has meant no laxness in discipline. On the other hand, it has promoted the good behavior of the prisoners. When Warden McKenty took charge, the custom was to release the troublesome prisoners as soon as possible, just to get rid of them. A premium was put on bad behavior. At once Mr. McKenty put a stop to this custom. Now a prisoner knows that if he breaks the rules he loses his commutation. The orderly prisoners are in line for parole. There are only two in the entire 1500 who, from their present record, will have to serve out the full term.

In the work of taking a personal interest in each prisoner, no man is more assiduous than Charles Carver, a member of the board. Mr. Carver is a lawyer, and he gives to the affairs of the prisoners thousands of dollars' worth of time for which he receives no pay.

With many of the prisoners he is on as intimate terms as Mr. McKenty. He shakes them by the hand, inquires after their personal affairs and makes them feel that they have a friend who is interested in them while there, and who will encourage them to take the right course after they are discharged.

Murrell Dobbins, president of the board, has as deep an interest as Mr. Carver or Mr. Balfour.

His chief effort is toward providing the kind of training that will help when the prisoners are in the world again. He believes that all the young prisoners should be taught trades. Mr. Dobbins gives a great deal of his time to the institutions, and his private contributions to their welfare are numerous.

Mr. Dobbins can be described almost as the mainspring of the board and of the new era. His training as a big business man has been invaluable in introducing economies into the prison management. He is always on the alert to stop waste and to establish features that will save money and add to the protection of the prisoners. An instance of this is the ice plant. This was built by prison labor at an expense of only $4000. The prison now saves the cost every year in ice and in provisions that are kept from spoiling. Sterilized and cooled water is piped to every corridor. Last year the prison didn't have a single death from typhoid.

While Mr. Dobbins expresses his interest in features of this kind, the moving force in his work is the warm, kindly, human nature of the man.

John E. Hanter the other member of the board works along the same lines as Mr. Dobbins, being particularly interested in the industrial work of the institution. His services are very valuable to the prisoners as individuals, as it increases the returns on their products and leaves them a larger balance to their credit when they are discharged.

All the time that the reform in the penitentiary has been in process the expenses of the institution were being cut down. Warden McKenty at the very outset changed the method of distributing food. The result was the saving of five barrels of flour a day. This was effected on bread alone, and on other provisions there were similar savings. Every prisoner gets all he can eat, but nothing to waste. If a prisoner isn't getting enough, all he has to do is to ask for more, and he will get it.

Some time ago it cost 26 cents a day for each prisoner. Now it costs only 16 cents, despite the increase in the price of provisions. The cost of feeding each prisoner is 12 cents a day.

There is no politics in the management of Eastern penitentiary. That tells the story of its economies and throws a powerful sidelight on the development of the new spirit. If the prison were made to contribute its due to the power of a political organization, it could not have been free in its humanizing influences.

Under the administration of Governor Stuart, the board was raised to a high standard. Warden McKenty went into office with the distinct understanding that he was not to be hampered, by any political considerations whatsoever.

The work that is being done in effecting economies in management, in reducing the expense of the institution to the state, is truly notable.

But above and beyond all this is the breath of humanity that has been breathed into the place, that has quickened to fire the cadavers of despair and defiance, that has opened to the light of usefulness eyes long accustomed only to the darkness of criminal ways, that has projected new vistas of progress in the reclamation of human deserts, that is so insistently enforcing the lesson of brotherhood which was written into the dawn of Christian era when Christ went up into the mountain and opened his mouth saying, "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even to them."

An English Author Wrote:

"No shade, no shine, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves—November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes constantly troublesome. There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, completely cures catarrh, and taken in time prevents consumption. We cannot see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cures. It is undoubtedly America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

CARING FOR CHINA

HINTS THAT WILL BE OF VALUE TO THE COLLECTOR.

Valuable Bits That May Be Cracked or Chipped Need Not Be Thrown Away—Cement That Will Accomplish Wonders.

To have a sensible fad and know it scientifically and thoroughly, is to be happy. Collecting china has always been a hobby among women who have a little money to spare, and many of them have acquired a certain amount of knowledge of porcelains and potteries; but when it comes to piecing together precious fragments, almost all women are helplessly ignorant.

However, a few collectors have determined to master the fad in all its branches—substituting for the charcoal blazers of the aged china-menders a spirit lamp, on which to heat her materials, providing herself with scissors, pincers, a box of water-color paints, a box of potter's clay, a lump of lead, a little gum arabic, and some plaster of Paris.

It is very delicate work, which requires a good deal of ingenuity, and at first she attempts no restorations, but simply mends broken bits. This is done with cement usually either purchased already prepared or made according to an old-fashioned recipe, melting and stirring together one ounce of white isinglass and three-quarters ounce of transparent gelatine in six ounces of water, adding three-quarters ounce of acetic acid while holding the vessel over boiling water until it is warm through. The result is a clear cement which does for either glass or china and lasts indefinitely, if it is put into a bottle or jar with a tight cork or screw top. Before using it warm the bottle in hot water and heat the china to the same temperature. When the fragments are stuck together with the cement drop a little hot sealing wax across the crack. This will give temporary support until the cement has dried.

If there is simply a small crack, which indicates a future separation of the parts, this may be filled in with a mixture of plaster of paris and gum arabic mixed with hot water to about the consistency of thick cream. When this has hardened it may be painted over.

But the most interesting and, of course, the most difficult and delicate part of china mending is restoring. If a handleless cup of precious pottery may be found, a real connoisseur knows how to replace it herself by means of a little modelling and the water colors already mentioned. If possible, a duplicate should be taken from the handle of a sister cup, but if there be no sister cup the collector must depend on her own modeling powers. A handle may be modeled from plaster of Paris mixed with gum arabic.

The new handle is fixed in place with cement. Before coloring prepare it with a layer of gelatine, and when this has dried color it with a thick wash of Chinese white. These serve as a foundation for the final colors, and when these latter have been applied the glazed china effect may be secured by varnishing with gum arabic and water.

Floor of the Summer Cottage.

It often happens that the floor of the summer cottage is rough and full of cracks, so that it is not satisfactory even when stained. When this problem meets the owner it is a good plan to cover that part of the floor which will not be hidden by the rug with canvas, which should be tacked in place smoothly and then given two or three coatings of good paint, to be followed by an application of varnish stain. This will give an excellent border, which can be easily cleaned, and which will answer all the purposes of a hardwood floor.—Suburban Life.

Baked Apples.

Prepare several good-sized apples by peeling and scooping out the centers. Fill each with blanched almonds, two teaspoonsful of brown sugar, two cloves and a tiny slice of lemon. Put them in a baking dish or pan with a cupful of water, the rind of a lemon, a tablespoonful of sugar, and a tablespoonful of butter placed in small lumps over the apples. A wineglassful of white wine or sherry may also be added. Bake until the apples are tender and the water has thickened to a sirup. Serve cold with whipped cream.

Lemon Custard.

Grate the rind of one lemon, take one cup of sugar and mix thoroughly with two rounded tablespoos of flour; beat the yolks of two eggs and mix with sugar, flour, lemon juice and rind. After mixing these add butter the size of a walnut (melted), then one cup of milk, and stir all. Last of all whip the whites of the two eggs stiff and mix in. Put in crust same as for any custard and bake slowly so as to bake without wheying it.

Rhubarb Roll.

Make a dough of half cupful of sweet cream, small piece of butter and teaspoonful of baking powder. Roll as for pies, only in one long strip. Cut rhubarb fine, spread over dough and cover well with sugar, sprinkle with flour and ground cinnamon, and bits of butter. Commence at each end and roll to center, place in deep pan (oyster pan is best), sprinkle the top with sugar, cinnamon and bits of butter. Cover with water and bake. Serve with cream.

Inauguration of Dr. Granville.

The "Lutheran Observer" of last week had an interesting editorial on the induction of Dr. William Anthony Granville into the presidency of Pennsylvania College, saying: It was the most elaborate and imposing ceremony in the history of the institution. It was a distinct departure from the simple exercises that hitherto have marked the inauguration of the executive head of the college. It was felt by the trustees that the time for this had come; that in this matter new occasions had brought new duties, and that what had been felt to be becoming and adequate in the past was no longer sufficient. In his eloquent address Justice J. Hay Brown, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, who presided over the exercises of the day with great dignity, spoke with reverent affection of the predecessors of the present faculty as of men who had wrought with fidelity and conspicuous success in the cause of Christian education and whose memories are cherished by the generations of students that came under their instruction and influence. We can all believe that, could they have returned to take part in these inaugural exercises it would have been in a spirit of full sympathy with the occasion and the manner of its observance.

There is every reason for confidence that Pennsylvania College is entering upon a larger educational career. If there were nothing else in the way of an omen the keen interest which is being taken by the constituency of the institution would itself awaken great expectation and hope. Many representatives of congregations on its territory were present at the inauguration exercises, and never before, perhaps, was there such a return of alumni and former students. They came, not as listless spectators, but full of enthusiasm and affection for their alma mater, joyfully acknowledging and proud of their relation to her. This interest of her own children in her welfare is an asset of utmost value. They are scattered abroad everywhere, many of them men of distinction, and in addition to their own loyal support of the college, they can and will create an atmosphere of favor toward her that will greatly further the efforts of the new administration.

Of Dr. Granville's qualifications for the high position to which he has been called there can be no doubt. He is a trained and experienced educator. Again and again he was voted by the students to be the most popular teacher in the Sheffield School of Yale University, while a series of mathematical text-books from his pen, now in use in many of the leading institutions of the country, attest his competent scholarship. He has already demonstrated his possession of administrative talents by the way in which he has been taking hold of things at the college. He is a man of method and order, able to formulate plans and show the way to the wise execution of them. He has, also, in a marked degree, the inspirational quality. He is moulded on large lines, big of body, brain and heart, a commanding yet most winsome personality. He has won the hearts not only of the students but of all who have come to know him, inside the institution and outside. He will have a cordial welcome in our congregations as he goes about in the prosecution of his difficult but congenial task, and we predict that wherever he goes he will make friends for himself and for his cause.

It ought to be understood that Dr. Granville has made distinct sacrifices in responding to the call of the trustees to the presidency of Pennsylvania College. No faint of self-seeking attaches to his acceptance of the position. Kind considerations of personal ease and financial gain have been paramount with him, he would have remained at Yale. But there are other values that weigh with Dr. Granville. In the summons that came to him he recognized the call of duty. If he was asked to make a sacrifice, it was for the denominational college, in whose mission he profoundly believes; it was for a college of the Lutheran Church, of which he is a convinced and devoted member; it was for his Divine Master who, he felt, was calling him to this particular sphere of labor. Need less to say, therefore, that despite the personal sacrifices involved and the heavy burdens to be assumed, he has not come to his new work in the re-

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, urinary disorders, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Gettysburg testimony:

Mrs. J. Warren Gilbert, 130 W. Middle Street, Gettysburg, Pa., says: "Since I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills two years ago, two of my relatives have taken them and have been greatly benefited. I suffered terribly from backaches, headaches and dizzy spells and I knew that I had kidney complaint. Nothing relieved me until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the People's Drug Store. I am grateful for the benefit that they have brought and shall always recommend them."

Their faith and optimism are a challenge to the loyalty of trustees, faculty, students, alumni and friends of the institution—a challenge which, we believe, there will be no disposition anywhere to evade.

Italian Gardens of the Renaissance

"November House Beautiful," replete with beautiful pictures and interesting articles contains one by J. A. O. Allan on "Gardens in Connection with Architecture," and says "The Italian Gardens of the Renaissance, by general consent, the most beautiful in the world. All that wealth, genius, and skill could lavish on the dwelling was found in the villas of the wealthy nobles and cardinals. For the realization of their building schemes they could call for such architects as Bramante, Michelangelo, Peruzzi, Giulio Romano, Vignola and Michelozzi. House and garden were equally the work of the architect, resulting in one complete and harmonious composition, the house being the climax of the garden and the garden the decorative setting in which the house was placed by a masters hand, a jewel of white gleaming marble. Although the word "villa" as transplanted into one tongue, speaks to us of the house only, it was not so in its native land. The word included not only the house, which was known as the casino, but also the giardino. House and garden alike were a reflex of the country, the climate and the habits of the people. The hilly ground created their terraced gardens, the climate forbade the wide lawns of more humid lands, its blue sky and burning sun called for shade, for the sight and sound, the sparkle and splash of water tossed in the summer breeze, or still in some deep pool, reflecting the azure of heaven on its bosom. The outdoor life of the people was evidenced in the gardens, which were really open air rooms and the luxury of the day was shown in the exuberant ornament, the grottoes, vases, and urns, priceless genius of the sculptor's art and in the profusion of statuary, which seems to stream out of the palaces—divinities and satyrs, nymphs and amorini promenading the terraces, trooping down the stairs and bathing in the cascades.

Increasing Revenue Receipts.

H. L. Hershey, internal revenue collector for the Ninth District, reports that the collections during the month of October were as follows:

Cigars, $209,230.98; spirits, $42,349; beer, $25,482; tobacco, $2,722.58; specialties, $516.25; miscellaneous, $26.36; totals, $280,322.62. In September last the total receipts were $278,387.07, and from cigars alone $202,549.56. In October, 1909, the total receipts were $277,156.60, and from cigars alone, $210,672.27.

The receipts from the sale of cigar stamps show that over 69,000,000 cigars were manufactured during the past month. This is the largest monthly output since October, 1909.

Cigar manufacturers say that there is an unusually active market for the cheap cigars and they are experiencing difficulty in securing material for binders. The trade will continue brisk until around the first of the year, the holidays always giving it an impetus.

Democratic Call to Arms.

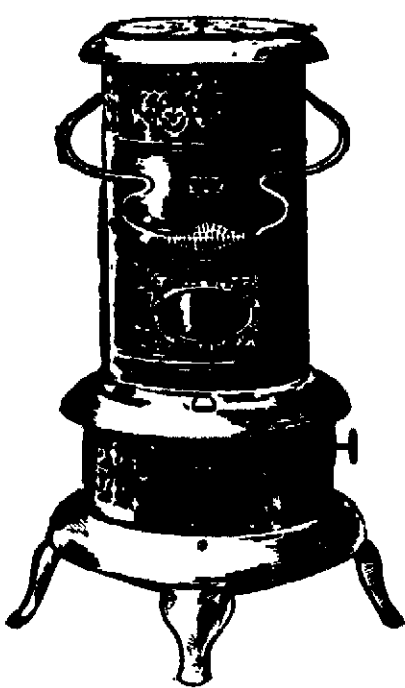

Senator Dewalt, Democratic State Chairman, after the result was known in Pennsylvania issued a statement under caption, "A Call to Arms—A Warning and an Appeal," as follows: "Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Ohio and Indiana have elected Democratic governors and made effective their protest against Republican misrule and the policy of the Republican party. Wherever elections were held this protest was manifest and pronounced. It was not a local condition. It was as widespread as the nation's extent. No such defeat of a dominant party has been experienced since the days of 1892 and it clearly foreshadows the election of a Democratic president in 1912, if the Democratic party makes no blunders, and is wise enough to read the lesson correctly.

"This same sentiment of revolution, for it was revolution and not rebellion, was just as pronounced in Pennsylvania as it was in New York and New Jersey and for the same reasons, and yet in Pennsylvania the protest was ineffective. Of the 480,000 votes cast 480,000 declared their hostility to the Republican party and its representatives in Pennsylvania, and yet these 480,000 ballots in the greatest state in the union, count for nothing so far as practical results are concerned. The Republican candidate is barely elected. He lost over 300,000 Republican voters who either refused to vote or voted against him.

"Three hundred and sixty thousand voters believing that the Keystone party was the best hope of defeating the Machine, rallied under its banner, and 120,000 Democrats, hoping against hope, and believing in the integrity of their party, followed their candidate to defeat. Pennsylvania, therefore, has a Republican governor who is not the choice of a large majority of its people, simply because the opposition to misrule was not united.

"It is of no avail to seek or give the reasons for this unfortunate division of the 480,000 voters. The fact remains that they were divided, and that 480,000 beat 480,000. Crimination and recrimination, fault-finding, jealousy and abuse can do no good; but only increase the harm. If fusion could have been effected the Republican Machine would have been defeated by a majority of over 100,000 votes, and this defeat would have been caused by the Republicans themselves, aided by the independent voters and the Democrats.

"The only sure method of defeating entrenched corruption is through a union of the independent members of a dominant party with a minority party, the members of which, as a rule, vote their party ticket. The efforts for fusion failed, and in parenthesis I desire to say that it was through no fault or lack of effort on the part of the Democratic chairman and the executive committee of the Democratic party.

"It is more than futile to question the sincerity of those who did not agree with me and it is equally useless for anyone to question the motives of those who coincided with me. A great opportunity has been lost, largely because self-interest outweighed the regard for public good. From this day the presidential campaign of 1912 will be the main consideration in every political movement. The Republican party has received its warning. If it does not heed it, its defeat in the next great contest is as certain as its present disaster. The Democratic party is the only organized political force in the state and nation through which, and by which, the voters can effectually dethrone the repudiated party now in power. In Pennsylvania the Democracy by this last election has also received its warning. There are over 450,000 Democrats in this state, and yet only 120,000 voted for Grim. What were the reasons? They may be concisely stated in the following words:

"First, dissatisfaction with party management and distrust of party leadership, however well or ill founded.

"Second, a desire to rebuke both regular political organizations.

"Third, the belief that the Democratic nomination was controlled or influenced by the agents of the Republican party and by discredited representatives of other organizations.

"Fourth, the belief that the Independent movement, represented by the Keystone party was the surest avenue of securing the defeat of the Republican Machine.

"It is of no benefit to discuss the truth or falsity of these reasons. The voters believed some or all of them and the result is what we know. The question then is, how can a similar disaster be prevented? The sentiment is here. The people are alive to the situation and it is their earnest desire and determination to have reform and justice. They do not believe in the policy of the Republican party, and they are disgusted with the political management of its leaders in this state. Can this militant force of 400,000 voters be united, and, with the recruits which such union would bring to their ranks, secure the desired result, to wit, the establishment of honest government in Pennsylvania?

"I believe that such coalition can be accomplished, but in order that it may be done, the Democracy of this state must infuse into its veins new blood. Political vassals must be put upon the museum shelf. Old methods, which are little better than those employed by the discredited party, must be abandoned, and all Democrats, not only lukewarm or entirely indifferent, must be invited once more to give their aid and counsel in party management. Past mistakes, either of judgment or of administration, must be forgotten, if not forgiven. The attempt at personal domination, or the rule of a few, must be avoided if sought.

"The Democratic party is greater than any clique or aggregation of a few, it is a potential fighting force of over 400,000 earnest people, and every one of them must be invited and solicited to join with every other honest man, in securing what every man in Pennsylvania wants—honest and economical government. Mere invitation is not sufficient. There must be no armed neutrality between these divided forces. There must be a sincere expression of the desire to get together, and that will be best evidenced by forgetting the past and looking toward a brighter future.

"There must be no more calling of names and abuse of individuals, personal preference must be subordinated for the good of the common cause, for I truly believe that however different the point of view, we are all looking to the accomplishment of the same end; divided, we cannot obtain it; united, we are certain to achieve it. The voters who left the ranks of the Democracy in this election should not be too harshly censured, those who remained in the ranks are not to be blamed and the Independents or Republicans who joined their forces must be encouraged, and the only way to encourage and solidify these, now divided, is to imbue them with the hope of ultimate success in 1912.

"Pennsylvania, with its 68 delegates in a national convention, is a power second only to one in the union. Its voice can be made resonant for reform and good government if these discordant elements join in one song. The chairman of the Democratic party, by the rules of the organization will remain its chairman until January, 1912. There is more than one year in which to labor for this union and, speaking as the head of the Democratic organization, I now maintain that my past efforts have always been to secure a united Democracy, and obtain the aid of independent voters. These efforts will not cease, and if a spirit of coalition and recognition of the just claims of every one, who truly has at heart the good of the cause, can effect the desired result, these elements shall not be found wanting in my conduct, or in the organization as now represented.

"The above is therefore, both an appeal and a call to arms, not a calling to arms with which to combat each other, but with which to combat the common foe. I call to those who are willing to forget self and to remember the high ideals of true Democracy, equal rights to all and special privileges to none."

OVER FOUR SCORE AND TEN

ONE OF McSHERRYSTOWN OLDEST CITIZENS FOUND DEAD.

Veteran of County Passes Away at an Age Exceeding Four Score Years.

SAMUEL G. SNEERINGER, one of McSherrystown's oldest citizens, was found dead in bed last Friday morning, Nov. 11, by his granddaughter, Miss Marie Timmins. His death was the result of a stroke of apoplexy received some time early that morning. Mr. Sneeringer was aged 90 years, 2 months and 3 days and made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Maggie R. Timmins of McSherrystown. Notwithstanding his advanced age, he enjoyed good health. His retentive memory and conversational ability were regarded as remarkable by his friends who enjoyed his society. Several months ago the editor had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Sneeringer at his home. He seemed in perfect health and all his faculties were unimpaired. He had a wonderful memory and vividly recalling incidents told several good stories of former days and showed his enjoyment of life by laughing heartily. He mentioned his age and when several Gettysburg citizens of advanced age were mentioned as active and spry, he answered with a laugh that he was as spry as any of them. Mr. Sneeringer was last seen alive at 2:30 a. m., by his daughter, Mrs. Timmins, who passed through his room and conversed with him. At 3:30 a. m. Charles E. Miller called at the Timmins' home to see Mr. Sneeringer on business, and when Miss Marie Timmins went to her grandfather's room, to call him, she found that he was dead. The deceased was a son of Joseph and Margaret (O'Boyle) Sneeringer, of Conewago township, and was married in 1842 to Miss Elizabeth Steiger daughter of George and Elizabeth Steiger, who died six years ago. He was a well known retired farmer and merchant, having farmed all his life near McSherrystown and in addition conducted a general store on Main street for a number of years. He is survived by the following children: Sister St. Ephraim of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia; Sister M. Raphael, Mother Superior at a Lebanon convent; Maggie R. Timmins of McSherrystown and one son, E. F. Sneeringer of Boyd's, Md. He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Augustus Dellone of Hanover and one brother, Vincent Sneeringer of Humbolt, Kansas. Five grandchildren also survive. Funeral services on Monday, Nov. 14, with a mass of requiem in St. Mary's Catholic church. Rev. L. Aug. Reudter officiating. Interment was made in their burial lot in Conewago Chapel cemetery.

Does Not Stimulate

Ayer's Sarsaparilla does not stimulate. It does not make you feel better one day, then as bad as ever the next. It is not a strong drink. No reaction after you stop using it. There is not a drop of alcohol in it. You have the steady, even gain that comes from a strong tonic and alterative. We wish you would ask your doctor about this. He knows. Trust him. Do as he says. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

What are Ayer's Pills? Liver Pills. How long have they been sold? Nearly sixty years. Do doctors recommend them? Ask your own doctor and find out.

LINEN NEEDS CARE

COMPARATIVELY EASY THING TO SPOIL FINE FABRICS.

Simple Precautions That Will Add Life to the Table Drapery and at the Same Time Greatly Improve Its Appearance.

The housewife who leaves to an overworked maid of all work the care of her linen need not wonder if her best linen is ruined soon.

The napkins should always be folded so the embroidered initial will show on the outer flap, but this still can be done and the napkin folded in different ways each time it is laundered.

Starch is an abomination in good table linen; however, if one has a well worn cloth which seems to have no "body," and thus becomes soiled quickly, it is wise to add about a quart of thin, hot "made starch" to half a tub of bluing water and wring the linen out of this; sufficient "body" will be given it to make it wear much longer before another washing is necessary.

When about to iron table linen prepare some hot borax water, and with a clean whisk broom sprinkle every inch of the linen thoroughly, roll up tightly in a clean towel, and let it lie for half an hour or so, and then iron. A small but heavy brush having stiff, fine bristles and a short, thick handle, should be used instead of a coarse comb for fringed linen and doilies.

When there is no room to put the cloth away with a single fold in the middle, it may be folded first in the middle and then the selvage sides may be turned back, thus folding the cloth into quarters lengthwise, having each fold appear on the right side; there must be no cross folds, however, nor are these necessary if a cloth is well ironed and aired, since it may be laid lightly away in the drawer and carefully smoothed out by hand when it is laid on the table. Several cloths may be stored perfectly in small space by hanging a wooden curtain pole against the wall of the linen closet, throwing the cloths over this pole, one over the other.

It is unwise to put away a piece of stained linen until the general wash day, which is always a difficult day in any household, and then try to remove it.

The average servant, when anything is spilled on a tablecloth, usually removes it from the table and thrusts it into a bag or hamper, still damp, along with the rest of the soiled clothes of a household.

Long before wash day arrives whole families of little creatures are at work and finally, when the linen is removed from the basket to be laundered, there is a greenish spot which cannot be removed only by the use of a strong bleaching agent which surely injures the fabric, although the injury may not be apparent at once. This is the case even if clean water has been spilled on the cloth; in the case of tea or coffee, wine, or fruit juice, if put into the hamper without first removing the stain and drying the cloth, not only is mildew apt to appear but the stain becomes set in the fabric so that it is well nigh impossible ever to remove all trace of it without using an alkali so strong that the fabric is weakened perceptibly.

Instead of first treating the mildew, after it has been allowed to form, the average servant puts the cloth to soak in strong soapy water—perhaps hot water—along with the rest of the soiled linen, and the last state of this tablecloth when it finally emerges from the laundry is worse than the first.

Beeswax in Cracks.

Ugly cracks or splits in furniture can easily be filled in with beeswax, so that the marks will hardly show. Furniture dealers cover up many blemishes in this way.

Slightly soften the beeswax until it becomes like putty; then press it firmly into the cracks, and smooth the surface over with a thin knife. Sandpaper the surrounding wood and work some of the dust into the beeswax.

This gives a finish to the wood, and when it is varnished the cracks will have disappeared. Putty is sometimes used in the same way, but it soon dries and falls out, while beeswax will remain in practically forever.

Florence Salad.

Make a stuffing of Dutch cheese, half of a chopped pimiento, half a minced onion, a dash of paprika, salt and pepper. Cut off the tops of some green peppers, wash and clean them inside, removing all the seeds; let them lie in cold water until firm, and fill them with the stuffing. Lay the peppers on a plate until ready to serve, that is, until the cheese has become perfectly firm; then cut them in slices a quarter of an inch thick, using a very sharp knife, and taking care not to disturb the cheese. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves with mayonnaise. This is an unusually pretty and novel salad if made carefully.

Raspberry Vinegar.

Put a pound of raspberries in a china bowl and pour over them a quart of the best white wine vinegar. Next day strain the liquid on a pound of fresh raspberries. The following day do the same, but do not squeeze the fruit, only drain liquor as dry as you can from it.

Almond and Celery Salad.

One pint of celery cut fine, one small cupful of almonds blanched and halved. Cover with mayonnaise dressing.

MALINDA'S HOMECOMING

By NELLIE CRAVEY GILLMORE

Copyright, 1909 by Associated Literary Press.)

Malinda arrived at the decision abruptly; she would go home that night. Jack Cottrell's declaration of love the night before had, presumably, been the eye-opener to her position; in reality it was the climax of gradual disillusionment.

She had been living in a fictitious atmosphere that daily was growing more flat and intolerable to her sensitively constructed temperament. At first the open prominence and success she had achieved in her work had exhilarated her; now she was beginning to suffer the inevitable depression of the aftermath.

Yes, she would leave New York (and her career) that night. To be exact, she would take the seven o'clock train that would put her in her home town at five in the morning. At first she thought of telegraphing; then she decided to surprise them all. How would they receive her? She had deliberately gone against her family's wishes in this move, and refused stubbornly, during the months that followed, to listen to their persuasions to return home.

And Billy? Had she ceased altogether to occupy a place in his thoughts? For a time he had written to her regularly, until only an occasional line found its way to her address, and by and by did not come at all. Malinda sighed as she packed her trunk with trembling fingers, and every little while paused to dash the mist from her eyes.

Promptly at 6:45 she bought her ticket and boarded the train. She spent a restless night, and reached her destination more nervous and depressed than she cared to admit, even to herself. But as she quitted the stuffy car and walked swiftly down the avenue toward her old home, she felt the heaviness lift magically from her feet, and the buoyant blood begin to pulse through her veins.

Avondale was sparkling in the pale, pink dawn. On every side, the rose gardens were languid with bloom, and the verandas hung with curtains of wistaria. Malinda paused a second with her hand on the gate latch, a swarm of uncontrollable emotions suddenly upon her. But she calmed herself in a moment, and passed through into the wide, shell path that curled itself picturesquely among the flower-beds, up to a short flight of stone steps.

She ran quickly up to the door, and fumbled in her bag for her latch key. The high, paneled door yielded instantly, swinging back on noiseless hinges under her light touch.

Inside, everything looked familiar enough. The same highly polished floors gave back her image as she glanced down; there lay the identical rich old rugs of oriental patterns, scattered about among the antique chairs; the self-same masterpieces hung suspended from the frescoed walls; the statuary stood just where it had stood on the night she went away.

With a deep-drawn breath that sounded surprisingly like a sigh of relief in her own ears, she threw herself into a chair to collect her tumultuous thoughts before proceeding to her own room.

After all, she reflected, it was a whole lot better to be at home—home, with her own people—than to be "sticking it out" alone among strangers, whatever the glory and profit. She was one of the few who had made the venture a winning one; yet had she been repaid for all she had missed in the intervening time? Strange she had been so utterly unconscious of the "aching void" until now in the flush of joy over her homecoming. And again she began to torment herself with wondering whether the triumphant results she was bringing home to her parents would in any measure compensate for her obstinacy.

Suddenly a whole regiment of clocks from here, there and everywhere began to strike six, and innumerable whistles shrieked the hour in various notes of warning.

Malinda started up in alarm, and, quietly crossing the length of the hallway, moved with half-hesitant steps up the deep, carved and carpeted stairway. The door of her sitting room stood ajar, and she entered noiselessly, dashed to her bag and parasol on the table, and spider-legged table that held the student lamp.

For the moment a rush of feeling dimmed her eyes so that she could not see, but she pulled herself together quietly and glanced critically about the room, noting with a little heart throb, that nothing, apparently, had been disturbed. Everything was just as she had left it—every picture and book. She bent toward the reading table with a swift rise and ebb of color. Her own photograph, the one she had given Billy Mowbray two years ago! He had, then, ceased to take even a friendly interest in her and gone so far as to send her picture back home—without a line to her. And then it came over her with a rush—why she had suddenly realized the emptiness of her life in New York; why she had come home and broken everything up at its very zenith. And now! A quick, mad desire to turn and slip away, out of the house, back to her work, took possession of her. Involuntarily, she picked up her parasol and bag and turned toward the door. But the sound of a footstep in the adjoining room, her bedroom, caused her to stop short.

The sight of a half-smoked cigar lying on the table caught her attention transiently. Her father! He must have cared very much indeed about his wayward girl, she mused, to be coming—perhaps living in her own rooms! A little sob caught in her throat, and she sank into a chair. It was out of the question to think of going back now after what she had discovered.

A second later the door at her back was pushed softly open and some one came in. Malinda bit her lips hard for self-mastery. Then a voice that sent the blood tingling to her temples spoke her name.

"Miss Lassiter!"

The girl was on her feet in an instant, pale, embarrassed, bewildered. She essayed to speak, but the word smothered on her lips.

"I'm awfully sorry," began Mowbray, apologetically, "but I thought you knew."

Malinda was regarding him dazedly, a horrible fear knocking at her heart. It had been almost a month since she had heard from home; could it be possible that—that anything had happened? The tears rushed blindingly to her eyes, and she staggered.

But Mowbray steadied her and pushed her gently back into the chair. "You mustn't," cried the girl, choking down a sob; "don't you see? I can't stay here—not another minute! But my mother and father—what has become of them?" There was tragic appeal in her voice and eyes.

"They are perfectly safe and well; I can assure you of that much, Miss Malinda. As soon as it is practicable I shall send you to them in my car. From present indications I presume your father's misfortune is unknown to you. It happens that he speculated heavily and lost; but not everything. However, it became necessary for this property to be disposed of. An almost despaired-of lift from fortune made me independent, and I bought it in."

When he finished talking Malinda was crying softly, the tears slipping in shining little rivers down her cheeks and dropping unheeded on her hands.

"When I learned that the place was for sale," proceeded Mowbray after a pause, "I resolved to have it at any cost. It seemed like—well, like being nearer to you, somehow, if you do not mind my saying it."

Malinda's tears ceased suddenly. "If it had to be anybody," she said in a low tone, "I would rather it were you."

Something in her voice, in her manner, and more than all in the determined avoidance of his eyes, made Mowbray suddenly bold. He bent swiftly and gathered her little cold hands into his warm palms.

"Malinda," he began eagerly, "let me tell you everything, now won't you? It isn't the time, nor the place, perhaps, conventionally speaking, but after what I've suffered the past year I can't let you get away from me again without hearing what I have to say. I think you must have known always, dear, that I loved you, didn't you? And you know, too, that it was because you were rich and I was poor that my lips were sealed. But I was working night and day, working as no man ever worked before—for none ever had so sweet and dear and precious an incentive—working to make myself worthy to ask you to be my wife."

He paused, out of breath from sheer emotion, the veins of his neck throbbing. In a second he went on: "In all probability your father will recover from this in a little while. They doubtless kept you in ignorance only to spare your anxiety, for your success had grown to be a matter of great pride to them and all of us. But somehow I knew that one day you would come back, and I was right, dear, in what I did."

Malinda felt the quick quivering and yielding of her fingers in his, and the next instant she had bent her cheeks upon them. No word was spoken.

"Will you come back home, sweetheart?" asked Mowbray after a long silence. "Our home?"

"I have come, Billy," she said, with a little tremulous inech of her breath, "to stay."

College Community House.

Tenney Hall, a community house, has been opened at Smith's college. The object of this house is to help the poorer students by reducing their living expenses to the least possible amount. The students are to be housed and fed after the principles of a socialist community. All expenses will be shared by the occupants of the hall, who will contribute just enough per capita to run the establishment. Each girl or group of girls in turn will be called on to do the housework and cooking so that the cost of servants may be avoided. The entire system will be under the supervision of the president of the college.

Invention of Machine Gun.

France is now in the midst of a controversy as to the identity of the man who invented machine guns. The invention has always been attributed to Gatling and Nordenfeldt, but it was recently asserted on some authority that the real inventor was a Japanese, in 1704, who was promptly killed for being too clever. It has now been put forward and hotly argued that what may be called French patents existed as far back as the fifteenth century, and some pieces in the Artillery museum are cited as evidence.

LOVE SINKS TO THE STOMACH

Danish Wife Learns Pinochle and Is a Good Entertainer—Her Duty, She Thinks.

"After marriage love sinks to the stomach. There is no doubt of it, my friend. The old adage is right." Here is a suffragist, a good suffragist, from Denmark, who has seen life and who knows.

"Three husbands have I had," says she, according to the New York Evening Sun, "and of what I speak I am certain. My first was an Englishman—a rare reputed difficult; my second was a Dutchman out of Holland, a good man, though Dutch; my third is a German, an 'echt Deutscher.' Yet from all these three have I received never anything but respect. Each has been an excellent husband; and for why? I have known my business as a wife. That is it in a fistful, yes. After marriage love sinks to the stomach."

Mme. Volkman, the president of the Independent Woman's Suffrage club in Harlem, speaks with the conviction and authority of experience.

"Let us come back to that duty of a wife. Evening comes. The good wife prepares for her husband an excellent repast, adorns herself within keeping of his means and from six to ten o'clock of an evening is she her husband's company.

"Pinochle she must learn, also dominoes. If she has no taste for these things that does not signify. It is her duty. A man will stay in his home quite content evening after evening so that he can put between his teeth a good pipe and sit down at ease to pinochle.

"I know what I say. Three husbands have I had and with each one it was the same. Now once a week there comes to my home a small club of my husband's. Three friends, a little beer and pinochle that makes for him his pleasure. That is my husband's one outside diversion. Ten cents or so changes hands for a pastime and for one evening I am relieved.

"Perhaps you ask: Is it not hard for an active woman of brains night after night to sit opposite her man and to play at pinochle. That is neither here nor there, my friend. Some sacrifice is necessary to all success. Only from a contented man will a wife get all what for she asks. Only from many contented men will many wives receive that woman's suffrage."

Accidents in Cotton Mills.

Cotton spinning mills in England, France, Belgium, Germany and the United States have, for a century at least been prolific sources of accidents arising directly from the machinery in use, as distinct from other causes. It was this prevalence of injury among cotton mill workers on the continent that called into being the Society for the Prevention of Accidents in Factories in Alsace 20 years ago, and excellent work has been carried on by this society and its ramifications among the cotton mills of Alsace Lorraine and Rhenish Prussia. It must, in fact, be credited to that disinterested body of mechanicians that they were the main pioneers of efficient safety devices for cotton machinery. During the last decade mills in England have adopted several of these appliances, improved on others, and from the inspiration given by those early efforts British engineers and machinists have invented many more which do good service every working day in the mill. The United States are now actively falling into line, and insurance companies are giving serious attention to the proper safeguarding of machinery in mills under their supervision.—H. M. Crawford in Cassier's Magazine.

A Legend of Embroidery.

Konan-tin, called "the Goddess of Mercy," who was a missionary to Japan from China, having left her native land to teach Buddhism to the Japanese, is said, according to tradition, to have been the earliest instructor in the art of embroidery known to the Japanese.

The young woman, who was a nun of high standing, was obliged to take refuge in a temple for a time, and there she and other women missionaries who had gone to Japan in the interest of Buddhism wrought out in their embroideries their religious dreams of a future world.

From this example the Japanese learned the rudiments of the art which they so wonderfully developed.

Other traditions have it that the nun did not teach the art of embroidery, but that she inspired those who were already acquainted with it to strive for more serious expression of their religious feeling through this art.

A Wave of Reform.

A Kindly Old Gent who was crossing a bridge was shocked to see a Tough Little Boy sitting on the rail and chewing the stub of a cigar. He said to the boy: "Sonny, it grieves me to see one so young indulging in such a degrading habit. Drop the nasty thing into the water and promise me you won't smoke another one, and I'll give you a dime."

So the boy dropped the stub, and promised. "And now," said the K. O. G., beaming through his glasses and handing over the coin, "tell me what nice things you can buy for ten cents."

"A package uv cig'retes," said the T. L. B. as he ran away.

Next day when the Kindly Old Gent crossed the bridge, there were ten Tough Little Boys sitting on the rail, all smoking cigar stubs.—Lippincott's.

A Novel Introduction.

The Dr. Howard Company have entered into an agreement with L. M. Buehler's drug store, by which a special introductory offer will be made of 25 cents on the 50 cent size of their celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia.

So remarkably successful has Dr. Howard's specific been in curing constipation, dyspepsia and all forms of liver trouble, that L. M. Buehler will return the price paid in every case where it does not give relief.

Headaches, coated tongue, dizziness, gas on the stomach, specks before the eyes, constipation and all forms of malaria and liver trouble are soon cured by this scientific medicine.

L. M. Buehler has been able to secure only a limited supply, so everyone who wishes to be cured of dyspepsia or constipation should call upon him at once or send him 25 cents by mail, and get 60 doses of the best medicine ever made, on this special half price introductory offer.

Wash That Itch Away.

It is said that there are certain springs in Europe that give relief and cure to Eczema and other skin diseases. If you knew that by washing in these waters you could be relieved from that awful itch, wouldn't you make every effort to take a trip to Europe at once? Would you not be willing to spend your last cent to find the cure?

But you need not leave home for these distant springs. Relief is right here in your own home town!

A simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients as compounded only in D. D. D. Prescription will bring instant relief to that terrible burning itch, and leave the skin as smooth and healthy as that of a child.

If you have not already tried it, get at least a 25 cent bottle today. We assure you of instant relief. People's Drug Store.
